

Meet Rebecca...

In May 2021, Rebecca, the lead singer of a local band, booked a venue to play a concert for their newest album. As Rebecca was helping set up for the concert, she ran an extension cord to power their speakers, but had forgotten to tape down the cord to the floor.

During the show, an attendee tripped and fell over the cord, resulting in a broken wrist and a concussion!

The attendee had reached out to the venue and Rebecca explaining they suffered lost wages along with treatment costs that they were seeking to recover.

Thankfully, Rebecca was a Duuo policyholder.

The liability portion of the event host's policy paid for the legal costs to defend her and the compensatory damages for the injured attendee. Since the venue was listed as an additional insured, the venue was covered under Rebecca's policy as well.

If I hadn't purchased an event insurance policy before the show, we would've been in even more trouble! I felt terrible that an audience member got injured, but I'm grateful my policy could cover the costs that resulted from it.
